MESSAGE FROM YOUR PRESIDENT....

May I take this opportunity to thank all who have helped us to get our organization underway, and also at this time ask that those who have anything to contribute to this bulletin to please send it to us for publication. If you have a family history or other information that would be of interest to others we would appreciate a copy of it. Any books or other genealogical or historical materials will be greatly appreciated. Keep your eyes on second hand shops, antique shops and auction sale, also rummage sales for old books and pictures. Please send your Queries and Missing Links by the 5th of the month prior to publication. Your Surnames and pedigree charts should be in before November 17 if possible.

It is not too early to get your membership dues in for 1965 as times seems to slip by on all of us.

Good Hunting!!

Lucille Geigle, Pres.

MY RESEARCH CREED

On my honor I will do my best to make this my research creed:

1. No one shall be better informed than I on my family lines. To permit anyone else in all the world to have a greater knowledge of the families from which I am descended is a reflection upon my efficiency as a researcher.
2. Every source which may possibly contribute an item to complete the record of my families shall be sought out and studied.
3. There shall be no such word as fail in my research vocabulary. I am interested in results—not excuses.

BOOK REVIEW

HAVE YOU AN OREGON ANCESTOR by David C. Duniway

For those of you who have ancestors in Oregon this book is a must for reading, it is designed to introduce you to genealogical research in Oregon. It describes sources for information relating to your ancestors and shows you how to proceed in your quest for proof. It stresses the need to have patience and imagination to be a successful researcher. It lists an appendix of county records showing where and for what date each is found. It discusses the Census records that are available, as well as Land records and many, many other sources that are available. Check your local library, they probably have a copy..

HISTORY OF ALICE ISOBELL SPENCER HIGH, of Ashland (Now Deceased)

Note: This was written by Mrs. High before her death and the original copy is in the Possession of Mrs. Floyd Nielsen of Ashland.

My father crossed the plains in 1860, in the train that Captain Lockwood brought through. My mother drove an ox team clear across the plains, and my father walked and drove all the loose and lame stock of the train. Sometimes he'd be three or four miles ahead of the train, and sometimes he'd be miles behind, letting the poor stock feed all they could. Father started to California, but when mother drove in to Emigrant Creek, southeast of Ashland, the front wheel of the wagon broke down, so, not being able to get the wagon fixed, father had to stay here. He worked for Mike Murphy most of the winter, and in the spring he took up a homestead and proved up on 360 acres right where Iowa street is now, as well as the City Hospital (now college building) and High School. My father's two big gates hung on those two oak trees where the Junior High School stands. (This has since been torn down and replaced by a Safeway Store).

My brother Edward and brother Fred and myself were born on the old homestead in Ashland. Edward was born in 1862, and in 1864 he died at midnight with the scarlet fever and at 2:00 O'clock Fred was born, making a death and a birth on the same night. On July 2, 1866, I was born, which made nine children in the family.

Now, the first thing I can remember was one morning when I must have been about three years old, and we had nothing but thin porrage for breakfast. My father said he would be home at noon with something to eat as he was working for a neighbor that day. I was always up when my father got up, so when the children got up and were around the table before they went to school, father had hauled up a load of limbs for wood. My mother went to get some wood for the fire, and a grouse was in the woodpile. She called all of the children to run out to help my brother, who caught the grouse. My mother said "Thank God, we'll have something for dinner."

The next thing I remember, my father was plowing and I was sitting on the plow beam. The mare father was working had a little blue colt. I said, "Paw, I wish that colt was mine", and he gave it to me. That winter father was away working and didn't come home for three nights. The night he came home, we just lived in a little board shack, something came in and made a lot of noise, ran around the house and scratched on the wall. We were all so scared, but brother Tom made a fire in the fireplace and held me till it went away. In the morning we found the tracks of a big cougar or mountain lion.

The next thing I remember was when I was about four years old. My brother John got hurt at school. His ankle was hurt and brother Tom and another boy carried him home. I saw them at the fence and called father. He had just got home and he carried John to the house. When I saw the blood, as father cut John's boot off, I fainted. The next thing I remember was when Dr. Inlaw came to care for John's ankle. Father said, "Now, look at my baby". I can remember the doctor so well. He had long chin whiskers, and held my hand in one of his and his whiskers in the other, and he said to my father, "You will never raise this baby unless you take her out to the mountains and just let her have animals for pets. I never saw a child like her. She hasn't one bit of life in her system, she is so sensitive." I was so sick for two days that I could not raise my head, and when I got so I could be up my father took me out where he was working. One morning after breakfast I saw father rolling up a blanket, and he told mother to bake two pans of bread. He said to me, "Bell, you get all the eggs you can today for me". Mother said, "What are you going to do?" Father said, "By thunder, I am going to find a place where I can raise my baby." So father took an old white mare and a two week old colt, and he started out was gone two weeks.

When father came home he had bought the only sawmill in Klamath County, which was on Spencer creek, the creek named after my father. When he moved there he gave $1800.00 for the property, and was to pay for it as he sold the lumber, so we moved out in March. My mother was sick - just weighed 90 lbs - the wagon was a bed like they haul sand in with a board across it for a seat. Father put mother's bed in the wagon. I was going on 5 years old, and the four older children stayed here in Ashland until school was out. When we got to Spencer creek, which the Indians called "Mulbrook" we had a small, one room cabin built right on the same floor as the sawmill. We had to rope the bed up against the wall in the daytime in order to have room. We had no furniture of any kind except a big rock fireplace in one corner. Father made a table and some benches out of rough boards. He hired Bill Trimble to run the mill that summer, and to teach my brother Tom to run the mill. Tom was sixteen year old. Brother John herded sheep here for Bob Hargadine to help father. That fall, my half-sister died and left a family of five. Father took care of the children until he could get places for them.

I have a kettle that the first man who had a store in Ashland, gave me, the Christmas after I was five years old. Father traded lumber for steers and stages until he got two yokes of oxen, with which he hauled lumber over the greensprings and Parker mountains, to Ashland. My sister, thirteen years old, died that January with Typhoid fever. We couldn't get a doctor, the snow was so deep. I slept with her and got up in the night to get water or anything for her. I held her hands and called "Father", when she passed on, for if ever there was an angel on earth Olive was, for she raised me as mother was sick.

The year I was six, father bought the old Brown ranch. It had a big log house on it, we moved in it. It was about 50 yards from the Klamath River. The Indians used to stop at the ranch as they came to Ashland with their packhorses for supplies. That is where I met Captain Jack, Scarface Charley and Slim Jim, as they stopped at our place to fish both spring and fall, as the silverside trout ran up Spencer Creek in the spring, and the salmon in the fall.

The year after I was seven in July, the Modoc War broke out. They ordered mother to move to Ashland, but the station had to be kept so the teamsters could have a place to stop. Mother wouldn't leave, and said if father was killed we would all go together. So the government sent 300 soldiers to be stationed on our ranch, with Captain Silver as commanding officer. General Canby stayed at our house over night three days before he was killed. He gave me a $50.00 green-back for waiting on table. I used to bake cakes in my little kettle for the soldiers and sold them for 10¢ a piece. Our house was a kind of fort and there were portholes in the corner of each room where they could shoot through, and the windows had shutters made out of 2 x 4's so the Indians couldn't see the lights at night. What we called our "Ladies Room", was located in the center of the building to give added protection to the women and children in case of an attack, was packed clear to the ceiling with hardtack for the soldiers, with only a corridor the width of the doors running through the center. Whenever there would be a scare about the Indians coming, mother would have me sleep in that space, because bullets wouldn't go through the hardtack. After General Canby was killed, I was going to the barn just at daylight, and I saw Captain Jack, on the other side of the river, cut our canoe loose. I went right on and fed the chickens, pretending I didn't see him, and when I turned to go to the house I saw Scarface Charlie in the tules, just a little way from Captain Jack. I watched them, and just as I got to the house they ran out in the field and pulled a black blanket over their heads. I told mother they were across the river, and she thought I was mistaken. I asked her to let me go and tell Capt. Silver, and told her to watch the "stump" as she called it. As I ran to tell Captain Silver, they ran. Captain Silver crossed the river with five men, and found where there had been six horses tied, with no telling how many more there had been in the tules.

When Captain Jack gave up, he said that they were going to cross the river at the fort on our place and get in the hills, but he said "Bell saw us," and we couldn't make it, and went back to Lost River. That is where they captured him.

I had no chance for school, as I stayed on Spencer Creek until was past thirteen. Then mother got sick, and we moved to Greensprings, where I could cord wood for father to haul to town. My brother John got sick and came home and died the winter after I was fifteen, and the last words he ever spoke were,

"Bell, go to school". I had never seen the inside of a schoolhouse, so father moved back to the old homestead, and I started to school, at the last half of the term, after Christmas. I was in the "Chart class," and didn't know one number. The teacher sent me to the board to write "100" and I couldn't do it. Professor Willits came down to Kate Thornton's room. I was crying because all the little children laughed at me, and Professor Willits asked her if she was having trouble with me. Kate said, "If every one is as good as Bell, there would be no trouble." When she called class she told the whole room that if any more of them laughed at Bell, she would punish them when she dismissed school. She asked me to stay one half-hour after school each night and to come one-half hour early in the morning and she would give me one hour of her time until I caught up. When school was out, I did my sister-in-law's washing and ironing all of her housework, to get her to help me two hours a day during vacation, so in the fall I started upstairs in the third grade. I went to school until I was seventeen. Then we moved back out to the old ranch and I lived there until I was married when I was 22, and moved to Ashland, where I raised a family of seven children.

LIBRARY HELPS...

For those of you who need help from books from libraries other than your local one....The local libraries will order books for you from the Oregon State Library in Salem. Also the Sutro Library has a vast amount of genealogical books, some of which they will send out to other libraries on interlibrary loans. On these books you will have to pay the postage one way. Its surprising how some large books only take a small amount of postage on book rates.

Be sure to take advantage of any helps that your local library has. They have more than you think and they are very cooperative.

RESEARCHERS REMEMBER..

Genealogy is more than a pastime. It is an art, and a science, requiring skill, training, and a certain amount of natural aptitude that has been sharpened by experience and by a vital, trained and not too exuberant imagination. A genealogist must have a passion for truth, a knowledge of record sources of the localities in which he is carrying out his search, and an ability to evaluate that which is found and must be able to detect error from truth.
